Whitney Benefits goes online with its own Web site

Whitney Benefits announced today the recent development of its Internet Web site, which is intended to "enable the community to learn more about the Whitney Foundation." "The site contains general information about different programs and projects throughout the community that Whitney is involved in," a press release from Whitney stated. "Some highlights of the web site include information on various educational programs, including the student loan program, photos and information about Whitney Commons and other exciting community projects. The site also contains links to 10 different "web cams" that broadcast 24 hours a day. To access the web site visit www.whitney-benefits.org.

Whitney Benefits also announced Monday that it worked with local telecommunication provider ACT to install teleconferencing equipment in the Whitney Community Vocational Center. "This is an extremely exciting opportunity for Sheridan and the surrounding communities to have access to state-of-the-art video conferencing equipment," said Tom Belus, the Whitney Benefits technology chair. According to the release, the teleconferencing equipment will allow local educational and community organizations to hold live meetings, classes, or training through video conferencing. Contact Whitney Benefits at 674-7303 for more information.
