

Both Will More Than Measure Up

Construction of a Whitney Memorial building means profit for the community.

Let us explain—

Profit number one: By providing a reading room, rest rooms and a gymnasium it will find a community need.

Profit number two: By being located contiguous to the new YMCA building, it will supplement and compliment the facilities to be included in that structure. The two buildings together will provide a gymnasium, a swimming pool, and various social and recreational facilities.

Profit number two is particularly important we think. The Whitney board could have chosen to erect a building of a different nature and serving other needs in a completely different location. The Whitney board is to be complimented for a decision which will result in a building whose facilities will tie in with another. This means that both the Whitney building and the YMCA building will do a better job together, than they could separately.

Profit number three: Youth in particular will be better served, individual adults will be better served, families will be better served, everyone will be better served.

And profit number three is perhaps the most important. The purpose of the YMCA building is to better serve the community, particularly its youth. The purpose of the Whitney building, since it is being tied in closely with the YMCA building will be likewise.

And the real value of either building in the end must be measured by the service or services it provides to make Sheridan a better place to live. We are confident that in terms of service the Whitney building will measure up. We are confident the YMCA building will measure up. And we are confident that together they will more than measure up. >
